Read the following passage and answer the questions given below:

(15)

Two wings of democracy have a tendency to be arbitrary. If a coterie has been able to win the elections with overwhelming majority it takes the dumb driven cattle- members of the Parliament – under its sway and legislates as it wishes. Thus, besides the executive controlled by the coterie, the Parliament too serves the interest no of all but those patronized by the ruling party. The two combine themselves to crush the voice of the people and to suffocate the opposition. Democracy becomes sham for the poor and the underdog. The Government loses its ears to listen to the bemoanings of the working women, its eyes to see the cruelty on bonded labour, the plight of the rural poor. It is only law that comes to the rescue of the common man. It is law that comes to the rescue of a Shao Bano. The Parliament brings bills to crush her. Democracy builds its mansion on the will of the people- the public opinion. Law stands a guard to let the journalist raise his voice to form it.

Answer the following questions set on the above passage:

- a) What is the reaction of coterie when it wins with overwhelming majority in a democracy?
- b) How do things move in the Parliament with M.Ps controlled by the coterie?
- c) In the event of such a Government what is the alternative left to the rural poor and working women?
- d) Use in sentences of your own of the following words:
  - i) Arbitrary                      ii) Patronized
  - iii) Suffocate                  iv) Underdog
